I did get a hold on him several times and came very close to putting the hooks on him, but Referee Roach, who, it seemed, was fighting Britt's battle, groughly pulled me away or stepped in tront of me, blocking my punches aimed I at his pet—James Edward.

In the sixteenth round I finally kidded Mr. Britt into a slugging match, a thing which I had been trying all during the fight, but without avail. I had been walking into Sir James without ever suarding a blow, trying to get him to swap punches, and this was my first opportunity to get him.

Mr. "Wise" Spider Kelly, falling for the act, yelled to Britt to "Knock 'im out!" and, of course, Jimmy tried to de everything his seconds told him.

I took all his punches for about forty-five seconds and backed up a step to lead him on. I didn't try to hit back at all, when suddenly I noticed Jimmy, step back. Then I knew he was tired, and I thought k was time to set sail and defined.

By I jumped out of my supposed trance like a flash of electricity and tore after Sir James, determined to do or die, and I knocked him practically out and over the ropes, when his seconds grabbed him the ring; at the same time the time the ting; at the same time the time of the Golden West. My timekeeper who held the watch protested, claiming without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to recard his full vitality and virility, quickly and quirtly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription, free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write for his measurements. nity hit him once in eight rounds yes- 1 terday. One of the clique was Charlie Seiger, the "Iron man" of Hoboken. To be truthful and exact, the only thing that saved Seiger from a knockout was the big gloves worn by Attell. The champion featherweight stuck punches into Seiger's midriff that would surely cause consternation even in the camp of a greater ring fighter than the Cardiff champion.

After seeing Attell on the scales, the beam registering 121%, it comes to our notice that for the first time since Driscoil has been in this country, conquering all those who would oppose him, he will on Friday night meet a man pounds—many pounds—lighter than the Cardiff that is not business according to decision. While Britt was a very clever boxer he was locking in a hard punch. He hit me numerous times on the Jaw, but could not even joxle me. He had one punch, though, that was a wonder. It was a low left-hand, swing that was a half uppercut and haif hook. He would rip this into a fellow's stomach and as a rule it was a winner. It was one of the best punches that has ever been used in the ring. I did get a hold on him several-times and came very close to putting the hooks on him, but Referee Roach, who, it seemed, was fighting Britt's battle, roughly pulled me away or stepped in front of me, blocking my punches aimed. In the sixteenth round I finally kidded Mr. Britt into a slugging match, a thing the correct sections and fight me. He finally agreed to sign a temporary set of articles and to sign and fight me. The story of the battle is too well known and; is probably fresh in the minds of the public, so I see no need of going into lengthy details in describing the harmonic that for the first time since Driscoil has been in this country, conquering all those who would oppose thim, he will on Friday night meet a man pounds—many pounds—lighter than himself. And this man, Attell, is of a different stripe than Marto or Cross, or the others whom Driscoil has met.
